

Abstract of FR2728983

The updating of candidatures commences with creation by the employing organisation of a computer file of selected candidates for preliminary consideration, with the surname and first name of candidates recorded in the file. A confidential code is then automatically attributed to each of the candidates, and the code is communicated to the applicant by post. The communication invites the candidate to connect electronically to the employing organisation and to complete a questionnaire. The candidates name is moved to the head of the file during their connection if the correct confidential code has been entered. The candidate is invited to enter salary expectations, location, type of contract sought and their telephone number.

Data supplied from the esp@cenet database - Worldwide